

Personal Website Project

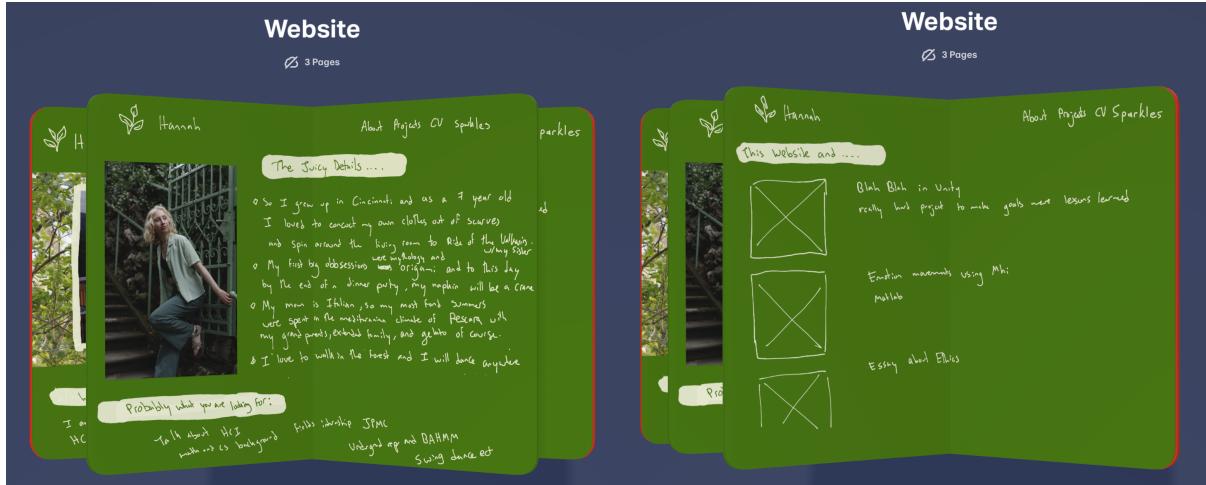

I created a personal website to help showcase my academic and artistic perspective and interests. During the design process, I focused on crafting a visual interactive experience to convey a holistic overview. I implemented six pages from scratch using HTML and CSS. The website includes a home page, a bio page, a portfolio of current and past projects, my CV, a list of sources that inspire me, and my contact information.

Initial Design Process

I started out the project by sketching out some layouts for different pages. I knew that I wanted the website to have a less formal, but visually aesthetic appearance.

Final Product

The site is hosted on GitHub and is coded entirely from scratch in html and CSS. A main goal was to do all the styling in CSS so that the design is easily adaptable. I focused on creating reactive layouts so that the website still looks good with different window sizes. As someone with dyslexia, I wanted this site to be accessible, so I picked a font and color contrast that is easier to read. I also used my experience in descriptive writing to craft vivid alt text for images, so the site is engaging for all form of perusal. In the future I hope to design a mobile version of the site.

The screenshot shows the final website for Hannah Johnson. The top navigation bar includes a sunflower icon, the name 'Hannah Johnson', and links for 'About', 'Projects', 'CV', 'Glimmers', and 'Contact'. The main content area is divided into two columns. The left column is titled 'Passions & Interests' and lists various topics: Interactive Technology, Dance and Embodiment, Disability Justice, Sustainability and Ecological Issues, Design Fiction and Participatory Design, Feminist HCI, Ethnography and Intersectionality, Soma Design, and Interactive Art. The right column is titled 'Breif Bio' and contains a longer paragraph about the author's passions and background. To the right of the columns is a large, rounded rectangular image of a person with blonde hair leaning against a green wrought-iron gate. At the bottom of the page, the text 'Longer Bio' is visible.

Dance Video Journal

- Embodiment • Environmental Alignment •

At the beginning of my undergrad, I began a mission to heal my relationship with dance and redefine what it means to be a dancer. This video journal consists of short improv dances. A major theme throughout this journal is celebrating place, as I converse with musical and environmental inspirations through dance.
